

Top 10 Reasons I Won't Support the #BlackLivesMatter Movement

Ryan Bomberger, Jun 05, 2020

The opinions expressed by columnists are their own and do not necessarily represent the views of Townhall.com.

Every life unjustly killed deserves justice. In the cause to make things right, I will not join a movement that has nearly everything wrong. More innocent lives have now been killed (including cops) since these predominantly violent protests began over George Floyd's horrific death. What about the black lives killed in this nationwide chaos? Do they matter?

"Well, you don't have to agree with everything. Just pick out the good things in the #BlackLivesMatter movement," I'm told. Really? Let's apply that same logic to another example. I've been repeatedly approached to partner with New Black Panthers in anti-abortion billboard campaigns. We agree on the violent injustice of abortion, and that's it. Our worldviews are diametrically opposed. But, but, but they believe unborn lives matter! That doesn't matter. Their mission is not my mission. I cover all of this in-depth in my new podcast, Life Has Purpose.

Yes, #BlackLivesMatter. But Truth matters. As a Christian, the Church should be leading on these issues instead of sheepishly following a deceptive movement hostile to the Gospel.

The original BLM founders, the #BlackLivesMatter Foundation (BLMF), created it to radically shift culture. The far-left Ford Foundation, the world's largest population control organization, vowed in 2016 to raise \$100 million for the Movement for Black Lives (MFBL)—a nationwide coalition of BLM groups (including BLMF). MFBL released a shocking manifesto of policy positions that are deeply political and deeply disturbing.

Drawing mostly from those positions, here are the top 10 reasons why I will never support the #BlackLivesMatter movement.

The premise isn't true. I hate racism. And I hate when it's used as a political weapon. According to the FBI's latest homicide statistics, I'm 11 times more likely to be killed by someone of my own brown complexion than a white person. Also, a comprehensive 2019 study concluded: "White officers are not more likely to shoot minority civilians than non-White officers." Every loss of life is tragic, but Washington Post's database on police-involved deaths puts things into further context. In 2020, among those killed were (all males): 2 Native Americans, 9 Asians, 46 Hispanics, 76 blacks, 149 unlabeled individuals and 149 whites (whose deaths don't get reported by national mainstream media). Only nine black individuals were actually unarmed.

There is no goal of forgiveness or reconciliation. None. It's never mentioned on their sites. You can't talk about the sins of the past and expect to move forward if there is no intention of forgiveness. I'm tired of the deeply prejudiced oppressed/oppressor critical race theory paradigm. It's not Gospel-centered. This should, immediately, be a deal-breaker for Christians.

It's all about Black Power. It's plastered all over the MFBL website. BLMF founders explain their "herstory": "It became clear that we needed to continue organizing and building Black power across the country." I don't promote a colorblind society; I love all of our diverse hues of skin. But I'm so much more than my pigmentation. Martin Luther King promoted "God's power and human power." I'm with him.

They heavily promote homosexuality and transgenderism. "We foster a queer-affirming network. When we gather, we do so with the intention of freeing ourselves from the tight grip of heteronormative thinking." I'm not embracing confusion. Loving every human being is not the same as loving every human doing.

Read full article here...