

The Pendulum... from Indian Removal to buying Mille Lacs

By Clarence Ralph Fitz, BS, DVM
With Lauralee O'Neil

VOLUME 2

SECTION 7: The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to proclaim new Indian reservations on lands acquired pursuant to any authority conferred by this Act, or to add such lands to existing reservations ...

The Indian Reorganization Act
June 18, 1934

This narrative starts with Andrew Jackson before the original colonies had declared independence from Great Britain, continues through Jackson's brilliant military career and through his becoming the 7th president of the United States. It continues through his promotion of the Indian Removal Act and the resulting tumultuous Trail of Tears.

The book then skips over the period covered in the book, and the Mille Lacs who have no reservation by this same author, and examines the lives of the principal actors who were responsible for the Indian Reorganization Act and the Indian New Deal in the FDR administration. It then delves into the passage of the effects of the Indian Reorganization Act on Indian tribes across the country but specifically on the band of Chippewa who no longer had a reservation on the south shore of Mille Lacs Lake in central Minnesota but who refused to remove as they had agreed to do, and explains how the area was purchased with taxpayer money for these homeless Mille Lacs Indians.
